

A PERSONAL GUIDE BY CLARISSE

From Lost to Launched.

The honest, practical roadmap for anyone rebuilding their career, building their voice online, or just trying to get their digital life to actually work — written from lived experience, not theory.

Career Clarity

Creator Path

Tech & Systems

I spent almost a year learning this the hard way.

I want to be upfront with you from the very first page: I am not someone who had it figured out. For close to a year, I was stuck — applying for jobs, waiting for replies, watching the rejections pile up, and wondering whether something was fundamentally wrong with me.

It wasn't. And nothing is wrong with you either.

What I eventually realised — after months of frustration — is that the person who succeeds and the person who doesn't have the exact same goal. They travel the same road. The only difference is one of them doesn't quit. That's it. That's the whole secret that nobody tells you when you're in the middle of it feeling defeated.

"The enemy of success is not failure. It is giving up. I've seen it too many times — people on the edge of a breakthrough who walked away one day too soon. Don't be that person."

— Clarisse

I stayed. I changed my strategy. I learned new skills. I worked on my visibility. I kept going even when nothing seemed to be moving. And I landed the job. Not because I was the most qualified — but because I was still in the room.

Now I help others get through the same process faster, smarter, and without doing it completely alone. This guide is everything I wish I'd had on Day One.

Before we begin — three questions

These are the first three questions I ask every person I work with. Be honest. Your answers are the compass for everything else.

1

What do you actually want?

Not what seems realistic. Not what others expect. What do you want?

2

What is your objective right now?

Land a job? Build an audience? Fix your tech? Get one clear outcome on the table.

3

What is your priority this week?

The one thing that, if done, would move everything forward.

Write your answers somewhere before you continue. Seriously — don't skip this.

Systems of advantage — so you win no matter what.

Before tactics, before CVs, before platforms — there is mindset. And I don't mean that in a vague, motivational-poster way. I mean there are practical daily habits that stack the odds in your favour, even when the external results haven't arrived yet.

Here's what I put in place during my hardest year. They sound simple. Some of them will sound strange. Do them anyway.

1

Speak what you want — not what is happening

I know this sounds odd. But what you say out loud shapes what you believe is possible. Stop narrating your current situation ("I can't find work," "nothing is happening") and start naming where you're going. "I am building something." "I am the right person for this." Say it even when you don't feel it. Especially when you don't feel it.

2

Every day: look in the mirror and speak to yourself

This is a non-negotiable I give every person I work with. Before you check your phone, before you open your email — stand in front of a mirror and say what you need to hear. Your goals. Your qualities. Your next step. It sounds crazy. Do it anyway. The science on this is real, and the results are realer.

3

Change strategy when something isn't working — not effort

Most people who stay stuck are working hard in the wrong direction. If you've been applying for three months and getting silence, the answer isn't to send more applications in the same way. The answer is to change the approach. I can help you figure out what to change and how. That's exactly what a strategy session is for.

4

Remove your attention from the rejections

Counting denials is energy leaving your body. Track your actions instead — applications sent, connections made, skills learned. Every one of those is a step taken. The job or the opportunity is coming. You cannot see it yet. That does not mean it isn't there.

"The moment I stopped measuring my progress by outcomes I couldn't control, and started measuring by actions I could — everything shifted. Not overnight. But it shifted."

— Clarisse

PART ONE

Career Clarity

For anyone rebuilding, redirecting, or starting fresh. We'll work through exactly what you offer, how to present it, and how to apply in a way that actually gets results.

- Audit what's not working — and why
- Build your skills inventory and CV narrative
- Apply with a daily system, not random bursts
- Build visibility while you wait
- Land the right role — not just any role

The career tools that actually work.

I landed my job. And when I look back, it wasn't luck. It was a specific set of moves — done consistently — that shifted things. Here's what made the difference:

Skill up — and feel it

One of the fastest ways to get out of your own head during a career search is to start learning. Not because a certificate will magically get you hired — but because when you start learning, you start feeling like you're moving. And that feeling matters enormously when everything else feels stuck.

There are genuinely free certifications on Google, Coursera, LinkedIn Learning, and HubSpot that can close gaps on your CV within weeks. I can tailor a learning path to your exact career target — which specific skills to focus on, which credentials carry weight in your field, in which order to build them.

Apply daily — with a system

Random applications sent whenever motivation strikes is not a strategy. It's a hope. What works is a daily application method: a fixed number of targeted applications per day, a tracking system, a follow-up sequence, and a review every Friday to see what's working and what to adjust.

I provide a weekly plan — personalised to your situation — that gives you exactly this structure. You stop guessing. You start executing.

Build visibility while you wait

Here is something most people don't think to do during a job search: start being visible. Post on LinkedIn about your field. Share what you're learning. Engage with people doing the work you want to do. Recruiters find candidates this way daily. Being discoverable is not the same as being desperate — it's being strategic.

I help with visibility strategies across LinkedIn, personal websites, and professional communities. Email me and I'll tell you what makes sense for your specific situation.

EXERCISE · 20 MINUTES

Your Skills + Your Story

Answer these four questions in writing. Your answers become the raw material for your CV, cover letter, and LinkedIn profile:

What have I figured out that most people in my situation haven't?

What's something I built, fixed, or improved that I'm proud of?

What do people consistently come to me for help with?

What would I tell a younger version of me, starting this career?

PART TWO

Your Creator Path

For anyone building a voice, a brand, or an audience online. The rules are simpler than the algorithm makes them feel — and the main one is still the same one: don't quit.

- Find your specific angle — the one only you own
- Choose one platform and go deep before going wide
- Weekly content systems that prevent burnout
- The one edit that changes everything in video
- Courses that actually develop you as a creator

The creator game — it's the same rule.

I've studied a lot of niches. I've watched a lot of creator journeys. And the pattern is always the same: the people who break through are not the most talented. They are not the best editors, the best speakers, the most knowledgeable.

They are the ones still posting when everyone else stopped.

I know how demoralizing it feels to be consistent and see nothing happen. To post the same type of content for weeks and wonder if anyone is watching. But here's what I've seen happen when people stay long enough: a small creative shift — a slightly different angle, one intentional edit in the video, a new hook — changes everything. The work was already there. It just needed a touch of creativity and a trained eye.

What I actually help creators with

- ☐ Niche I study your specific niche — what's oversaturated, what's underserved, where your unique research. angle fits. You stop posting blindly and start posting with strategy.
- ☐ Weekly content systems. A structure for your week that means you're never starting from zero. Templates, hooks, formats — built around your schedule and your voice.
- ☐ Video feedback. Sometimes it's one edit. One moment cut. One section moved. I'll watch what you've made and tell you exactly what the change is.
- ☐ Course recommendations. There is so much in creating that isn't obvious — colour grading, audio, thumbnails, scriptwriting. I'll point you to the specific courses that will move the needle for where you are now.
- ☐ Tools that save hours. Editing shortcuts, AI-assisted captioning, repurposing workflows. I'll build your toolkit so you stop spending 4 hours on a 60-second video.

"Sometimes it's one touch of creativity. One edit. One different framing of the same idea. The content was always good. It just needed a trained eye. That's what I'm here for."

— Clarisse

Email me with your current platform and your last 3 pieces of content. I'll come back to you with what I see and what I'd change. That's how we start.

PART THREE

Tech & Systems

For anyone who has been putting off their "digital setup" because it feels overwhelming. You don't have to figure it out alone — and it's simpler than it looks once you have the right person guiding you.

- Domain, hosting & professional email — done properly
- Website that converts and represents you
- Email list — the one asset you truly own
- Tools that do the work while you sleep
- My exact free stack — zero expensive tools needed

I went through it. Today I know the struggle.

I am not a developer by training. I built soulandsystems.co myself — the hard way — working through DNS errors, email delivery failures, broken configurations, and hours of documentation that assumed you already knew what you were doing.

I don't want that for you. You don't have to do everything alone. Having someone guide you through your tech setup means you get hours back — hours you can spend on the actual work you're trying to do.

What you actually need — in order

1

A domain name

Register on Namecheap. Enable auto-renew immediately — this is the one thing you cannot afford to lose. ~€10–15/year.

2

A professional email

hello@yourbrand.com instead of Gmail. Set up via Zoho Mail EU — free, reliable, and takes 30 minutes with the right guidance. Changes how you show up instantly.

3

A simple website

One page. Who you are, who you help, how to reach you or download your freebie. Built with HTML/CSS on GitHub + Vercel (free hosting, automatic deployment).

4

An email list

Social followers can vanish overnight. Your email list is yours forever. Start with Kit.com — free to 10,000 subscribers, handles lead magnets and automation sequences.

"The tech is never the real problem. It just feels that way when no one has shown you the path through it. I've built the map — you don't have to draw it yourself."

— Clarisse

If your tech setup is causing you stress — the website, the email, the tools — reach out directly. I'll get into it with you. You focus on your work. I'll make sure the systems support it.

"The person who succeeds and the person who doesn't have the exact same goal. They walk the same road. The only difference is one of them doesn't give up."

— Clarisse · Soul & Systems

Your 7-Day Launch Plan

One real action per day. Designed to fit into your existing life — each one takes 20–30 minutes. By Day 7 you'll have more real momentum than a month of thinking alone. Don't skip the early days — they build everything that comes after.

DAY 1 • FOUNDATION

The Three Questions

Write your answers to the three questions from page 2: What do you want? What's your objective? What's your priority this week? Write them on a piece of paper. Set a timer for 20 minutes. This is the most important thing you'll do all week.

DAY 3 • CAREER / CREATOR

Skills Inventory

Complete the Skills + Story exercise from page 5. List every transferable skill, every problem you've solved, everything you know that most people don't. Then circle the 3 that energise you most. Those are your direction signal.

DAY 5 • SYSTEMS

Build Your Digital Foundation

Check what you have: domain? Professional email? Simple website? If not — today is the day you start. Register your domain on Namecheap. Get a professional email on Zoho Mail EU. Both done in under an hour with the right guidance. Email me if you get stuck.

DAY 7 • CONNECTION

Reach Out — Don't Go Alone

Identify the one thing still blocking you. Write it as clearly as you can. Then send it to me: admin@soulandsystems.co — or book a discovery session on soulandsystems.co. This is where the real work begins: together.

EVERY SINGLE DAY

One Act of Courage

Send the application. Post the content. Make the call. Book the session. Courage is not the absence of fear — it's the decision that your goal is worth it.

YOU'VE DONE THE HARD PART — YOU STARTED

You don't have to do the rest of this alone.

I spent almost a year figuring out everything in this guide on my own. I made it through — and then I made a decision: I'm going to help every person going through the same thing get there faster, with less pain, and with someone in their corner.

Here's how we can work together:

☉ Free 30-Minute Discovery Call

We talk through where you are and where you want to be. You leave with your next 3 clear steps — no pitch, no pressure, just a real conversation. Book directly at soulandsystems.co.

◆ 1-on-1 Sessions — Career, Creator or Tech

Whether you need a personalised application strategy, a content system for your niche, or someone to sit with you through your tech setup — I'm here. Email me directly at admin@soulandsystems.co and I'll get back to you.

◆ Weekly Clarity — Join the List

Every week: one practical strategy, one mindset shift, one thing I've learned or tried. Free. No spam. Real signal. Sign up at soulandsystems.co — and I'll be in your inbox on Monday morning.

As you wait — build your visibility. Learn a skill. Do the mirror practice. Move daily. I'll be watching for your email.

soulandsystems.co

admin@soulandsystems.co · Built with purpose, one step at a time · © 2026 Clarisse