

SOUL & SYSTEMS

The Starter Guide

Three short worksheets — Opening, Middlegame, Endgame —
to run the method on your own goal before you ever get on a call.

BEFORE YOU START

How to use this guide

Grab a pen. Fifteen minutes, honestly answered, tells you more than most people learn in a month of good intentions. Work through the three phases in order — Opening, Middlegame, Endgame — the same shape every real goal moves through.

---

PHASE ONE

Opening

Know your position

Before any plan gets built, get honest about where you actually stand — not the version you'd say out loud to someone else.

What do you actually want here — not what you think you should want?

---

---

What are you not willing to trade for it (sleep, relationships, your values)?

---

---

Honestly, on a scale of 1–10, where are you today?

---

---

PHASE TWO

Middlegame

Build your system

This is where the goal turns into a structure — sized to your actual life, not an idealized version of it.

What's one realistic weekly rhythm you can commit to, starting this week?

---

---

What does the "bad week" version look like — the minimum you'll still do?

---

---

Who or what will hold you accountable when motivation dips?

---

---

PHASE THREE

Endgame

Sustain the win

Reaching the goal isn't the finish line — keeping it without burning out is.

How will you know you've actually arrived — what changes in daily life?

---

---

What's the early warning sign your system needs adjusting?

---

---

What's one habit from this you want to keep, even after you hit the goal?

---

---

NEXT STEP

You already know more than most people who start.

When you're ready to build the system around what you just wrote down, book your free Position
Check — a short call to map your position and your next concrete step.
